RATIONALE

Animal fighting is illegal in all states and has been proscribed in Michigan since at least the 1870s. Despite being subject to criminal sanctions, animal fighting rings, particularly involving dogs, continue to operate in Michigan and throughout the country. Often, dog fighting operations involve many other crimes, such as gambling and tax evasion, and the fights draw people who engage in other illicit activities such as drug and weapons crimes. It has been suggested that, due to the multifaceted nature of animal fighting, the crime should be included in the racketeering provisions of Michigan Penal Code, that proceeds of the crime should be subject to seizure and forfeiture, and that certain property used for animal fighting should be deemed a public nuisance.

CONTENT

Senate Bill 356 would amend Chapter 47 (Forfeiture or Seizure of Certain Property) of the Revised Judicature Act (RJA) to include a violation of Section 49 of the Michigan Penal Code in the list of crimes for which property may be seized and forfeited.

Senate Bill 357 would amend the Chapter 38 (Public Nuisances) of the RJA to designate a building, vehicle, boat, aircraft, or place used for conduct prohibited by Section 49 of the Michigan Penal Code as a nuisance.

Senate Bill 358 would amend the Michigan Penal Code to include a violation of Section 49 as a predicate offense of racketeering.

Section 49 of the Michigan Penal Code prohibits various activities relating to the use of an animal for fighting or baiting, or as a shooting target. Those activities are subject to felony penalties, while other violations of the section are misdemeanors. Subject to requirements for turning an animal over to a humane society or animal welfare agency, all animals being used or to be used in fighting, baiting, and target shooting, and equipment, devices, and money involved in those violations, must be forfeited to the State.

Senate Bill 356

Under Chapter 47 of the RJA, the following property is subject to seizure by, and forfeiture to, a local unit of government or the State:

- All personal property that is the proceeds of a crime, the substituted proceeds of a crime, or an instrumentality of a crime.
- All real property that is the proceeds of a crime or the substituted proceeds of a crime, except real property that is the primary residence of the spouse or a dependent child of the owner, unless the spouse or child had prior knowledge of the crime and consented to it.

In addition, in the case of a crime that is a violation of Chapter 83-A of the Michigan Penal Code (the Michigan Anti-Terrorism Act), all property described above and all real or personal property that performed one of the following functions is subject to seizure and forfeiture:

- Contributed directly and materially to the commission of the crime.
- Was used to conceal the crime.
- Was used to escape from the scene of the crime.
- Was used to conceal the identity of one or more of the individuals who committed the crime.

Under the bill, the forfeiture provisions that apply to a violation of Chapter 83-A also would apply to a violation of Section 49 of the Penal Code.

Senate Bill 357

Under Chapter 38 of the RJA, a building, vehicle, boat, aircraft, or place is a nuisance if it is used for certain illegal activities. The bill would include a building, vehicle, boat, aircraft, or place used for conduct prohibited by Section 49 of the Penal Code.

(Chapter 38 allows the Attorney General, a county prosecuting attorney, or any citizen to maintain an action for equitable relief in the name of the State to abate a nuisance and to enjoin any person from using nuisance property for any of the purposes specified in Chapter 38. If the existence of a nuisance is established, an order of abatement must be entered, and property may be seized and forfeited. The proceeds of the sale of the personal property must be applied to the costs of the action and abatement, and any balance must be paid to people entitled to it as directed by the court. Upon the payment of costs, the filing of a bond, and the payment of a penal sum, a building may be returned to an owner if the owner immediately abates the nuisance and prevents it from being established or kept there within one year from the date of the judgment.)

Senate Bill 358

The Penal Code prohibits a person from engaging in certain activities through a "pattern of racketeering activity" (at least two incidents of racketeering that have interrelated characteristics and amount to or pose a threat of continuing criminal activity). "Racketeering" means committing, attempting to commit, conspiring to commit, or aiding or abetting, soliciting, coercing, or intimidating a person to commit an offense for financial gain, involving any of the violations specified in the Code. The bill would include a violation of Section 49 concerning animal fighting.

ARGUMENTS

(Please note: The arguments contained in this analysis originate from sources outside the Senate Fiscal Agency. The Senate Fiscal Agency neither supports nor opposes legislation.)

Supporting Argument

While animal fighting has been illegal in Michigan for well over a century, and the practice carries significant criminal penalties, the law is silent on the economics of animal fighting. Animal fighting operations, particularly dog fighting rings, are a big business and the current penalties may not be sufficient to deter the practice or punish the offenders. Animal fighting typically involves gambling and tax evasion schemes. Thousands of dollars can be exchanged on a single fight between dogs. Also, animal fights often draw interest from individuals involved in other illegal activities, such as drug and weapons trafficking. Since these operations are by nature a criminal enterprise and not just individual illicit acts, animal fighting should be included as a predicate offense in the Penal Code's racketeering provisions. Doing so would subject organizers to enhanced penalties and give the violations a higher profile, which could result in more focused enforcement of the prohibition against animal fighting.

In addition, subjecting the proceeds of animal fighting violations to the State's general seizure and forfeiture laws and including property associated with animal fighting in the public nuisance provisions would give law enforcement more tools to combat animal fighting and prevent dog fighting rings from regrouping and continuing their operations.

Investigating and prosecuting dog fighting rings usually involve many hours of cooperative work and effort between law enforcement agencies in different jurisdictions. This can be a very expensive undertaking. Subjecting organizers and violators to property seizure and forfeiture also could help provide resources to Michigan law enforcement operations that have been hard hit by the economic downturn and commensurate budgetary strains of recent years.

Supporting Argument

Animal fighting operations are brutal and cruel. Dogs are bred and trained to fight and kill, and often are subjected to steroids or other drugs to make them more ferocious. Fights are usually bloody and can last a long time, as dogs are weakened under the powerful jaws of other canines. People who abuse animals in this way may be more likely to commit violence against people. Subjecting offenders to greater criminal penalties and economic sanctions could reduce the level and likelihood of violence committed against animals and humans in Michigan communities.

Supporting Argument

In some areas of the State, there is an increasing problem of stray dogs roaming the streets. Some of these strays may have escaped or been released from dog fighting operations. Indeed, a member of the Michigan Senate recently was attacked by a stray pit bull that likely had been part of a dog-fighting operation. By increasing law enforcement options for combating animal fighting operations, the bills could lead to a reduction in the stray dog problem in Detroit and elsewhere in Michigan.

FISCAL IMPACT

Senate Bill 356

The bill would have an indeterminate fiscal impact on State and local government. There are no data to indicate how many offenders would be convicted of an animal fighting offense.

Senate Bill 357

The bill would have no fiscal impact on State or local government.

Senate Bill 358

The bill would have an indeterminate fiscal impact on State and local government. There are no data to indicate how many offenders would be convicted of an animal fighting offense. To the extent that violations of MCL 750.49 increased the number of racketeering convictions, the State could incur additional costs related to incarceration. Additional penal fine revenue would benefit public libraries.
