SUMMARY:

House Bill 4288 makes a correction to a provision pertaining to the conditions under which a tribunal of this state would have jurisdiction to establish a support order under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA).

Specifically, the bill amends UIFSA to specify that a tribunal of this state could only exercise jurisdiction to establish a support order if the petition or comparable pleading is filed after a pleading is filed in another state or a foreign country if all (instead of one) of the listed circumstances apply. Listed circumstances include:

- The petition or comparable pleading in Michigan is filed before the expiration of the time allowed in the other state or the foreign country for filing a responsive pleading challenging the exercise of jurisdiction by the other state or the foreign country.
- The contesting party timely challenges the exercise of jurisdiction in the other state or foreign country.
- If relevant, Michigan is the child's home state.

The bill would take effect 90 days after enactment.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION:

Among other things, the UIFSA provides guidelines and procedures for the registration, recognition, enforcement, and modification of foreign support orders from countries that are parties to the 2007 Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance. Under the UIFSA, a state or foreign country that issues a support order consistent with that state's or foreign country's law is the only state or foreign country that can change this order as long as one of the parties or the child lives there.

The following information was obtained from a brochure published by the Friend of the Court Bureau within the State Court Administrative Office entitled, "The Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA): Working Together to Collect Child Support":

Before UIFSA was enacted, if parties moved to different states or foreign countries, a court in a party's new state or foreign country would often issue a new support order. Differing orders for the same payer and children led to confusion and disagreements between parties, states, and countries.

Now all state courts and courts in participating foreign countries follow UIFSA's rules to determine the order that has priority and the state or foreign country courts that have the power to change the order, otherwise known as continuing exclusive jurisdiction (CEJ). The state or foreign country that is determined to have CEJ is the only state or foreign country that can change the support order.

FISCAL IMPACT:

House Bill 4288 would not have a significant fiscal impact on the state of Michigan and no fiscal impact on local governments. By requiring that all three listed conditions be met before a court can establish a support order, instead of just one, it is likely that there may not be any change, or possibly even a decrease, in the number of child support orders, and thus, in the amount of administrative work that the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) must perform for these orders. Certain child support orders, such as foreign support orders, can increase administrative costs to DHHS, for the added expenses such as for the translation of foreign language orders and for currency conversion calculations.

Currently, Michigan receives many more support orders from other states or countries establishing payments to Michigan residents than the number of support orders that are processed to send payments out from Michigan residents to other states or countries. In 2014, Michigan processed 1,369 support orders establishing payments from Michigan residents to other states and countries, while the state sent 6,377 support orders requesting payments to collect support for Michigan residents from other states and countries.
